EDST 508A–081: Indigenous Inquiry and Methodology

Are you interested in:

- Working in partnership with Indigenous peoples and communities?
- Indigenous epistemologies, pedagogies, methodologies and/or research orientations?
- Critical and contemporary debates on Indigenous issues and relationships?

Then this course is for you!

Overview:

This introductory course situates students within postcolonial, decolonial and Indigenous theories to examine responsive research ethics, protocols and methods that can inform collaborative research relationships and processes with Indigenous peoples and communities. Cultural, political, social and spiritual dimensions of Indigenous education and existence will be discussed.
