

November is just upon us, and suddenly, the term is slowly coming to a close. In the midst of work, papers, assignments, presentations, and other what-nots, we hope you are taking time to relax and enjoy the spectacular fall colours that are around us. Make sure to join us in the events we have prepared for you this month.

Preparing an outstanding Literature Review November 7, 2019 | Thursday

Location: PCOH 1306A

Time: 03:00 pm to 4:00pm

Hosted by: Dr. Tom Sork

Review – From a Reviewer's Perspective

Dr. Tom Sork
Professor, EDST

Nov 7, 2019 (Thur) | 3 – 4 pm | PCOH 1306A

Graduate students are expected to produce well-written, carefully-organized, comprehensive and critical literature reviews as part of their academic studies. Many books and other resources are available to guide students through the process, but this session will focus more on the expectations of faculty, examiners, journal editors and others who read and assess reviews. The characteristics of high quality reviews and common flaws to avoid will be discussed along with the role that an outstanding literature review can play in the development of one's academic career.

Graduate wellbeing ambassadors (GWA's) are fellow graduate students here to support graduate student mental health, wellbeing and community. We want to understand the specific needs of our community and support them with social events, workshops, peer support and connecting students to resources that are available at UBC and beyond.

This is the first year of the GWA Program at UBC, so please bear with us through the learning process. If you have any suggestions, or ideas about how we can better support you and each other, please don't hesitate to get in touch with us at:

UBC

Partnership Recognition Fund

Low barrier funding up to $1,500 for community partners of UBC faculty, staff or students.

Apply by Nov. 8

Low-barrier funding for community groups working in partnership with UBC faculty, staff or students.

Amount: Up to $1,500 (min. $500)

Next deadline: November 8

NOTE: The November intake includes one-time funds for housing-related collaborations that further ideas articulated in the report that came out of the UBC President's Community-University Roundtable on Non-Market Housing Innovation.

Every day, people on and off-campus work together on joint initiatives that benefit both the community and the university. Engaged research, experiential learning, planning and policy development, educational programming, dialogue projects, workshops – our impact grows when we work together.

The Community Engagement Partnership Recognition Fund (PRF) is designed to help fill small resource gaps and acknowledge the contributions that community partners make to UBC. It also aims to raise awareness about the value of relationships and working together in a thoughtful way.
