On Zoom

As part of our Responding to Racism fall series, we've heard from three excellent speakers (Drs. Wane, Opini, and Perry) who have shared ideas around some of the changes we need to make in our teaching and learning, as well as administrative practices, to respond to the perpetuation of racism and colonialism in our department and university.

This final session considers some of the circularities that tend to emerge in the context of well-meaning change efforts that nonetheless reproduce colonial patterns. Using a workshop format, we will invite participants to practice developing the stamina and the affective and relational capacities that are needed in order to 'stay with the trouble' over the long-haul, especially when things get difficult or uncomfortable. The facilitator for this session will be Sharon Stein and the host will be Alison Taylor.
